

Dr. Raman Preet

Umeå University, Sweden

Dr Raman Preet is a public health professional with expertise in global health and dental health. She has rich experience in health consortia management and working with teams in diverse cultures and contexts. She is competent in international research management; communication & dissemination; and diplomacy. Since 2012, Raman has been coordinating and managing public health research projects, especially the European Union funded projects involving 38 organisations in 20 countries with a total grant portfolio of 20 million Euros. Currently, she is the Co-Coordinator of an ongoing EU H2020 research consortium, ZikaPLAN.

Raman champions the inclusion of global health across disciplines and professions. She interacts with different professional student groups and teaches global health to medical students; global oral health to dental students; and various aspects of collaboration, coordination and management to public health students at Umeå University. Her teaching philosophy is of a role model, hence enjoys mentoring young professionals, supports their learning by exploring and supporting platforms for knowledge exchange, and liaises with many networks for finding opportunities. With bachelor's degree in Dentistry (Punjabi University, India), MSc in Dental Public Health (UCL, London) and Master in Public Health (Umeå University, Sweden) Raman has 20 years of experience in healthcare and global health.

Dr Raman is a member of the Global Health Committee of the Swedish Medical Society. She is an invited expert of the TDR (UNICEF/UNDP/World Bank/WHO Special Programme for Research and Training in Tropical Diseases). Dr Preet features as a global health professional in the 'Women in Global Health' Sweden Chapter.
